3. It has now been established that such status as a small entity was established in error in good faith as follows:

Applicant erroneously in good faith believed itself entitled to small entity status, and has now discovered that this is not so. Santera Systems, Inc., the Assignee of record, is an entity with fewer than 500 employees. At the time of filing of the patent application, Santera Systems, Inc., was a wholly owned subsidiary of Tekelec, a large entity. Accordingly, the application was filed asserting large entity status.

In April, 2007, GENBAND Inc., a small entity, purchased all of the outstanding equity in Santera Systems, Inc., from Tekelec. Accordingly, applicants' attorney believed the application to be entitled to small entity status and asserted small entity status by paying small entity extension of time fees with an amendment filed on October 29, 2007. On November 1, 2007, applicants' attorney learned that as part of the transfer to GENBAND Inc., Tekelec obtained a license back to the subject invention, thus disabling the application from small entity status.

Accordingly, the erroneous assertion of small entity status was in good faith. Accordingly, large entity status is now believed to apply to all documents filed in this patent application.
